

About the Journal

The Journal of Nursing Science Update is a peer-reviewed, open-access journal offering a comprehensive platform for publishing various nursing articles and research trends, published by Department of Nursing, Faculty of Health Sciences, Universitas Brawijaya. Our ultimate goal is to drive the development of nursing research into clinical evidence that can be readily applied to practice. Our readership includes esteemed members of the national and international nursing community, educators, health professionals, policymakers, and interested public members across the globe.

Authors interested in submitting their work to the Journal of Nursing Science Update must adhere to the Instructions for preparing the manuscript and the Author Guidelines. The manuscript's methodological and discussion sections must be thorough and demonstrate high rigor and reflexivity in the production, analysis, and explanation of the research data.

We strongly recommend authors use our user-friendly online submission system to upload their manuscript files and track their submissions' status during the review process. The benefits of publishing in the Journal of Nursing Science Update are immense, including but not limited to opportunities for collaboration, avoidance of duplication, open educational resources, equitable access in developing countries, the democratization of access, increased citation and usage, greater public engagement, heightened visibility and readership of research, grown interdisciplinary conversation, retention of copyright, licensing under Creative Commons, promotion and publicity of quality research, and full compliance with funder mandates.
